Last summer, my parents sent me off for a two-week visit with Uncle Hank. Uncle Hank is my faverite uncle. He runs an earthwirm farm. Hank has had a lot of birthdays and has plenty of winkles, but if you call him old, he'll call you a traytor and laugh. He is still full of life and enerjy. His grammer isn't perfect, but he knows lots of humerous stories and tall tales. He will look you in the eyes and tell you very urnestly about the time a 12-foot-long alligator, fought off a whole family of grizzly bears, or semilar curagous, hair-raising adventures! There is not lack of fun around Uncle Hank! Before he retired, Uncle Hank was a circcuit judge. My dad says he is a wourthy man and a curteous gentleman. I wish everyone could have an Uncle Hank.
